Bunker Hill Farms in Illinois is No Longer Chicagoland's Best Kept Secret

Did you know that golf gives more to deserving charities than all four major sports combined? But it's not just the weekly TOUR stops doing the giving, it's ingenious golf lovers who view the game as a philanthropic vehicle. One such local visionary is Mike Domek. Domek created a foundation and has opened up his personal retreat to groups who want a private experience for the ages that includes the opportunity to play his ingenious 18-hole, 6,700-yard championship track. The course is part Rich Harvest Farms, part Augusta National, part TPC Sawgrass all rolled into one. The layout features only 8 greens, so players can navigate to varied putting surfaces, creating a cross-country golf experience that has few rivals.

From corporate retreats and intimate events to private, personal stays with friends and family, Bunker Hill Farms is an exclusively private experience. From the moment you step onto the property, you are transported to a tranquil escape – 450 acres of lakes, prairies, gardens, and various wildlife – with both land and lake adventures for relaxation and exploration.

Midwest Golfing Magazine had the unique experience of seeing this palatial estate in person as part of their media day in mid-May and came away thoroughly impressed by their substance and style. We were treated to an amazing meal by Bunker Hills' Executive chef, Mario has 13 bedrooms (with sleeping capacity of 30 in shared beds), making it ideal for cooperate functions or large family gatherings.

"In 2005, my wife and I saw this property and the dream kept building from there," says Mike Domek, Founder of Bunker Hill Farms. "We've expanded the original 150-acre area to 450-acres and are excited to keep adding experiences across this beautiful landscape. It started as our home away from home and now we want to share it with the country."

If you're looking for a magnificent memory that ties in a charitable aspect, Bunker Hills Farms was created with your group in mind. Plus, it's important to note that all proceeds support local charities. For more information and/or to inquire about booking your stay, event, or experience log on to www.bhfarms.com.
